Comes now Amici in the above an moves as follows:

1. On July 3, 2012, in response to the Board’s invitation a group of labor and industrial relations scholars submitted a brief amicus curiae to the Board.
2. In view of the haste in which the brief was prepared it contained four typographical errors:

- a. p. 2, 1st full paragraph, line 10: from “necessary” to “necessarily”
- b. p. 15, 1st full paragraph, line 13: from “of individuals” to “of the individual’s”
- c. p. 19, last sentence, second line: “have possibly have compromised” to “have possibly compromised”
- d. p. 27, last full paragraph, end of first sentence: period after “prove it”

3. Subsequent to the brief’s submission additional scholars have come forward seeking to inform the Board of their concurrence in the brief, viz.

Trevor Bain (University of Alabama)

Adrienne Eaton (Rutgers University)

Hoyt Wheeler (University of South Carolina)

4. WHEREFORE Amici move the Board to permit the correction of the typographical errors contained in the brief as submitted. These make no change of substance but merely correct rather obvious grammatical errors.
5. WHEREFORE Amici also move the Board to permit the addition of additional amici.
6. A properly proofed text is attached with a full text of amici.

Respectfully submitted,

Matthew Finkin
Counsel for Amici
